ERI & Sequest: A partnership for a full range of cyber security solutions

ERI is pleased to announce that it has concluded a partnership agreement with Sequest. This will enable ERI to provide a full range of cyber security consulting and associated solutions to its customers using the OLYMPIC Banking System in all major financial centres where ERI operates.

Nicholas Hacking, Sales Director, ERI said: "our customers face unprecedented security challenges. We therefore selected Sequest as a cyber security partner as they offer expertise and powerful technology solutions that can support our customers in protecting against evolving cyber and digital threats. I was impressed with their vision for meeting dynamic cyber security challenges head on. The ability for our customers to access a world class cyber security platform at a fraction of the normal investment level is a compelling proposition for organisations that want robustness and resilience in this digital age."

Robert McClure, Managing Director, Sequest added: "As a modular solution, the OLYMPIC Banking System offers financial institutions the ability to progressively add functionality as business needs change and expand. The Sequest cyber security platform can be viewed as another modular add-on, ensuring ERI customers benefit from complete protection against growing cyber threats. As a product agnostic integrator of cyber and digital solutions, Sequest can be relied on to provide independent advice and guidance on how each customer can best mount an effective defence. We share the same values as ERI, namely a strong focus on customer service quality and building long term relationships using technology as an enabler for delivering digital excellence."
