ERI - Capgemini partnership: supporting private banks

Many banking institutions are currently considering outsourcing all or part of their operations owing to the complex regulatory environment, increasing costs, and the need for products to be constantly updated to meet the requirements of increasingly demanding clients. To address the specific needs of private banks in Europe, ERI and Capgemini, one of the leading international firms for consulting, IT services and facilities' management, have announced a partnership to create a shared services' centre.

Capgemini provides wealth management institutions a flexible, cost-effective and high-quality offering that comprises IMS (Infrastructure Management Services), AMS (Application Management Services) and BPO. This offering will initially be rolled out in Switzerland and Luxembourg with other countries set to follow.

OLYMPIC Banking System has been chosen as the main software platform for this future services' centre.
